ABOUT TOWN.

We regret that lack of space compels us to omit this week a number of items received late in the week.

We call attention to the meeting of Friends of Prohibition next Monday evening, as are welcome.

The Bloomfield Temperance School will give an exhibition, at Dodd's hall, this evening, commencing at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Cyrus Pierson has sold his new house on Oakland avenue to Mr. Frank Hinkle. When completed the house will be occupied by Mr. John Zabriske.

Work on the new house of Mr. Williams corner of Hillside avenue and Clark street is proceeding rapidly. Mr. Williams expects to occupy the house the latter part of December.

Mr. W. T. Howe starts to-day for a month's trip through the Virginias, North and South Carolina and Georgia. He has some best wishes for a pleasant journey and a safe return.

A Republican mass meeting will be held in Library Hall next Wednesday evening. An address will be delivered by the Hon. Joseph L. Barbour, of Connecticut. All are invited.

At the meeting of the Township Committee Wednesday evening, it was resolved under the Gas Company $2.25 per thousand feet with the condition that mains be laid in certain designated streets.

As the CITIZEN goes to press early this evening, we are unable to give a report of Mr. Duffield's lecture delivered last evening. The advance sale of seats, however, predicted a good audience.

Last Saturday afternoon several young men held a fair in the tower on Mrs. Duffield's grounds. A very pleasant time was enjoyed, and about thirty dollars were raised to be used in a charitable purpose.

During the present gas famine in Bloomfield, some of our thoughtful citizens have placed lanterns and reflectors at their doors or windows, to give light to those who are in the streets. This is an excellent and worthy the adoption in all of the town forthwith.

The property owners on Hillside avenue have taken the matter of grading that street into their own hands, and within the week have completely changed the topography of what was once a mere by-way. It will soon be one of the most attractive streets on the west side.

We hear much complaint about the railroad crossing at Hillside avenue. If there is any crossing in town in which safety gates it is this one. At the township Committee has any power in the matter, we hope they will not let this street rest until the gates are placed there.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Westminster Church, met in the parlor Wednesday afternoon, where some interesting letters were read. The friends of Miss Mattie Noyes were glad to learn of her restoration to health, and her re-appointment as missionary to the West Indies.

One of the most important improvements recently undertaken in Bloomfield is a new bridge now being erected over the stream by the Montclair and Green Brook Railway Company. The old structure has long been an eye sore to our people. The new bridge is both handsome and durable.

—Miss Libbie Smith and Miss Florence Lee arrived home from their long vacation Tuesday evening.

—The marriage of Miss Carrie Davis to Mr. Sears, of Montclair, is announced to take place of the 29th of October.

—The meeting of the Essex County Hunt, announced for last Monday, has been postponed to Monday next, at the same hour and place.

—Miss Anna L. Ward has arrived home from New Foundland, where she has been spending the Summer in company with Miss Florence Hayden.

—A meeting of the Bloomfield Building Association was held Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. A. R. Brewer. A semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent. was declared, payable immediately.

—It has been proposed that the Lawn Tennis grounds be flooded as soon as winter fairly begins, and a skating rink be formed of attractive locality. Roller skates are nowhere in comparison with ice skates in supplying incidents for the town paper and accidents for the town surgeons. Let's have the ice.

—There will be a slight change in the subject of Dr. Knox's next historical lecture, on Tuesday evening, the 21st inst. Instead of "The One Hundred Years before 'Bloomfield, 1796,'" the subject will be "The One Hundred Years before the Revolution." The Revolutionary period will be included in the third lecture.

—A number of young ladies have formed a literature class with Miss Sarah Davis as leader, to pursue this branch of knowledge in the most approved method. The class promises to be highly interesting as well as instructive, as periods of time are to be taken and studied, not only from a literary, but also from a historical, scientific, artistic and moral point of view.

—We understand that a movement is on foot to organize a company to manufacture gas from water. It is said that gas made by this process is very much less expensive than coal gas. We hope the project will be carried into effect speedily. Meanwhile the Township Committee should proceed at once to light the streets temporarily with gasoline, kerosene or something else.

—Library Hall was comfortably well filled Wednesday evening, the occasion being a political meeting of our Democratic fellow citizens. A very eloquent address was delivered by the Hon. John P. Stockton, who was followed by the Hon. John W. Browning. Mr. Wm. Agar presided, and the Bloomfield band furnished the music. The Dickinson Battery and the Cleveland and Hendricks Legion of Bloomfield were put in full force.

—Query: Isn't the postoffice meant as much for the benefit of town people as for the residents of the United States in general? If it is, and there is a conviction to that effect, why can't we have one box exclusively for drop letters and papers, marked "Bloomfield Mail," or anything else distinctive. Some such method would save valuable time and temper. Time for the postmaster, and temper for the individual who does not receive an important message until several hours after it has been mailed by a person in town.

—On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week Mr. Cooke had a fine night-blooming cactus in full bloom, on exhibition at the Watessing station. The flower began to open about twelve o'clock at noon, and unfolded gradually, until, at ten o'clock in the evening, its pure white petals were almost fully expanded. A blossom lasts only a day. At the time the plant was seen Wednesday evening, the first blossom hung as limp as Oscar's lily, and quite as unattractive, but the second was in perfect beauty, and filled the waiting room with its delicate odor. The plant itself is a species of cactus, and it is hard to believe anything so beautiful and pure can come out of the thick, coarse, fleshy stem on which the flower grows.

Fire Department Notes.

Two new members joined the Truck Company this week.

Essex boys had their truck insured for $1,000 against fire, and $1,500 against accident during its trip.

A trial of the water on Ridgewood avenue by the Hose Company showed sufficient force for any use in case of fire.

During the visit of Essex H. and L. Co. No. 1 to Middletown, old Truck 1, of Newark, was in their house ready for service.

The firemen are on the lookout for alarms, as the old stoves and furnaces are lighted. All flues and chimneys should be carefully examined.

A still alarm in Dodd's Express office on Sunday, was answered by the Truck Company with extinguishers, but was found to be smoke from a defective chimney.

The handsome carriage of Phoenix Hose Co. No. 1 (formerly Bloomfield Hose Co. No. 1) has been inspected and admired by many citizens since its arrival. They are pleased to show it to all visitors.

Grand Republican Parade.

On October 24th all the Republican Clubs of our town, Orange, East Orange, Montclair, and Arlington, and the Wilkinson Engineers and Frelinghuysen Guard, of Newark, about fifteen hundred men in all, will participate in a general parade. It is expected that this will be a grand success, and we ask our fellow citizens to join us in giving the visiting companies a warm reception, and illuminate and decorate their houses in worthy manner along line of march, which is as follows:

The line will form at 7:45 sharp, right resting on Orange street. Through Orange street to old road, to Franklin street, to Broad street, up west side of Park to Beach street, to Elm street, to Bellevue avenue, to the hill East of Thomas Oakes, and counter march to Spruce street, to Canal street, to Broad street, to Park street, to Jersey street, to Park avenue, to Bloomfield avenue, to Ridgewood avenue, to Washington street, to Thomas street, to Henry street, to Glenwood avenue, to Bloomfield avenue, where column will pass in review, and halt for refreshments.

The marshals will gratefully accept any offers of assistance to prepare and distribute the refreshments at the close of the parade, and any person desiring to co-operate will kindly communicate through the post office, or otherwise.

I desire to say, for the benefit of any who may be sick or suffering from nervous prostration, that no cannon firing will be indulged in along the line of march in this parade, or at any other time, only at sufficient distances from any thickly settled neighborhood.

RICHARD HANDY,

Major Commanding.

Republican Banner Raising.

A handsome banner, containing the names and pictures of the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President, was stretched across Glenwood avenue and dedicated with appropriate exercises on Friday of last week. The various uniformed companies formed early on Bloomfield avenue, the cavalry taking the lead, followed by the mounted Caldwell Company, the Engineers, Lehlbach Corps, Pioneers, Colored Company and the Bloomfield Battery.

After marching down the avenue, the line passed under the banner, their bright uniforms and fine marching eliciting many favorable comments from the large assemblage of people gathered in the street. Rockets and colored lights added to the brilliancy of the scene. Upon one side the banner, a platform handsomely trimmed with flags and lanterns was erected, for the accommodation of the speakers who were to address the meeting.

Mr. George W. Cook, President of the Bloomfield Club, spoke of the demand, upon the part of the Democratic party, for a change. For sixty years, from 1800 to 1860, almost without a break, the Democratic party controlled the government of this great nation. The Republican party has been in power twenty-four years. When nine more Presidents have been elected and served out their time, when thirty-six more years have passed and the Republican party has reached the same limit of sixty years, then, and not till then, will we talk of a change. Mr. Cook then introduced the Hon. F. S. Fish, of Newark, who spoke of the great benefits to the country of the measures adopted by the Republican party. The advantages of a protective tariff and a sound currency were particularly dwelt upon. At one point in his address the speaker paused, and asked: "Is there a latter in this audience?" He then proceeded to show that in England, or in this country in the event of free trade, this man would receive $1.25 per day, while now he was paid from $2.50 to $4.25 for his work per day. Holding up a bill, he said it was a promise to pay, made by one of the old State banks of Augusta, Maine. A poor widow, having but $700 in the world, deposited her all in this bank, taking for her gold bank bills, of which this was one. In a short time the bank failed and her little all was gone. Before the establishment of the National Bank System, it was impossible to use the notes of a bank in one section of country in another section. Now the greenback was good for its face, not only in every State of the Union, but in foreign lands—in England, France, Germany, or China. He knew, for he had passed them there himself. Not only so, these bills were unaffected by any failure, anywhere. A bill upon the Mechanics' Bank is as good now as before it failed, because its credit is maintained by the power of the general government. The party which has done so much for the workman should be sustained by his vote at the polls. In conclusion the speaker, who was prevented from speaking longer by the dampness of the air, paid a glowing tribute to the memory and services of James G. Blaine, the Republican candidate for the Presidency.

Mr. C. N. Bovee, Jr., followed in an address eulogistic of the services of the Republican party in the establishment of a sound finance, and the protection of the workman.

Mr. Herman Lehlbach, the Republican candidate, arrived upon the ground under escort of the Lehlbach Corps and Bloomfield Battery. Speaking of his last term in the Legislature, he described the passing of the bill for the protection of workmen by the abolition of the Contract Labor System. A petition was received in the Assembly sixty feet long, containing a solid list of names, asking for this protection. The Republican party had hastened to do justice to the workman in this matter. So in the matter of a protective tariff they had proved themselves the friends of the laboring man. If elected he would give his time and labor to uphold this wall of defence against the pauper labor of Europe. In conclusion, he thanked the Lehlbach Corps for the honor bestowed upon him in the use of his name. He hoped this company and all the uniformed men would stand firm in the battle, in which the ballot is the only weapon. Peacefully it falls, like the snow from heaven, but like the lightning executes the people's will. Mr. Lehlbach spoke with great earnestness, and was listened to with attention. His powerful voice enabled him to be heard for a long distance, while his modest manner, manly figure, and earnest words, showed that he will prove no sinecure in the present contest.

At the close of the exercises, the uniformed men paraded through the main streets of the village.

"Essex" at Middletown.

The excursion of Essex Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, to Middletown, N. Y., was the pleasantest experience the boys have ever had, and they speak in very enthusiastic terms of the reception given them by the Excelsiors, who entertained them.

The truck left on Wednesday morning in charge of several members of the company. The company, thirty-six strong, and their guests left on the Erie Railroad Wednesday afternoon in a special car, arriving at Middletown at 7 o'clock. They were met by the Excelsiors, who escorted them to the Madison House, which had been secured as their headquarters.

In the evening the boys were entertained in the parlors of the Excelsior house, and partook of an elegant collation, provided by the lady friends of the company. They were welcomed by Rev. Charles Beattie, chaplain of the Excelsiors, in a pleasant address, which was responded to by Mr. William R. Weeks.

Thursday dawned pleasantly, and the Hooks were driven in carriages to visit various points of interest, returning in season to meet the Lincoln Post Drum and Fife Corps and additional guests, who arrived at half past eleven.

The grand parade of the Middletown Fire Department and visiting companies (which was in celebration of their twenty-fifth anniversary), started at 2 p. m., and paraded through the principal streets, passing in review before visiting chiefs and assistants. The following was the order of the parade:

Police.
Chief of the Department.
Assistant Chiefs and Visiting Chiefs and Assistants.
Tioga Hose and Steamer Co., No. 1, of Waverly.
Collins' Band of Newburgh.
Mouhagen Hose Company, No. 1, of Middletown.
Clayton's Band of Ellenville.
Scoresby Hose No. 1, of Ellenville.
Citizens' Cornet Band of Middletown.
Eagle Hose Co. No. 2, of Middletown.
Walden Cornet Band.
Enterprise Steamer Company No. 2, of Walden.
Warwick Cornet Band.
Phoenix Engine Company No. 4, of Middletown.
Erie Cornet Band, of Port Jervis.
Fowler Hose Company of Port Jervis.
Rummet Cornet Band of Port Jervis.
McQuoid Engine Company No. 3, of Middletown.
Lincoln Post Drum Corps.
Essex Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, of Bloomfield, N. J.
Goshen Band.
Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, of Middletown.
Carriages with invited guests, Boards of Trustees, Water Commissioners, etc.

All the companies presented a fine appearance. Excelsior H. & L. Co. marched with 69 men, and were the finest looking and marching company in the line. The Lincoln Post Drum and Fife Corps, in their new uniforms, attracted much attention, and their fine marching music was a subject of favorable comment with all. The impression made by our boys and their fine apparatus can best be told by quotations from the Middletown papers:

"The Essex Hook and Ladder Company made a splendid appearance. The men in fine body of men and in their dark blue uniforms looked finely. The white drag rope thrown over their shoulders looked prettily. A pair of horses drew the truck."

"The truck brought by the Essex Hook and Ladder Company, of Bloomfield, N. J., was the handsomest as well as the most complete one of the kind ever brought out in a parade in this village. It is of plain hard wood, polished, with vermilion trimmings and silver-plated ornaments. In addition to the usual outfit of a Hook and Ladder truck it is provided with four Holloway patent fire extinguishers, a force pump and two coils of hose, so as to be prepared to fight fire in every way."

After the parade came the grand banquet in the ball room of the Madison House. An elaborate menu was served, and when the handsome tables were nearly empty, chairs were pushed back and good humor began to flow. Mr. Geo. H. Decker acted as toastmaster. The toasts and responses were as follows:

"Our Guests"—Wm. R. Weeks, of Bloomfield.
"Our Active Firemen"—Dr. S. H. Talcott.
"Our Foreign but Sister Village, Bloomfield, New Jersey"—J. Banks.
"The President and Board of Trustees of the village of Middletown"—President J. N. Pronk.
"What I Know About Firemen"—Rev. Charles Beattie.

"The Old and the New Knowledge"—B. F. Gordon.
"The Ladies"—Richard Hand.
"Music"—C. T. Vail.
"Our Sister Fire Companies"—M. J. Stivers, of Arrangement of Crusher and Screen for Road Material, as designed and manufactured by the Beckett & McDowell Manufacturing Co., Arlington, N. J.
Capacity, 5 tons an hour, 50 tons a day. Crushing to 1/4, 1/2 and 3/4 inch cubes.

The only circumstance to mar the enjoyment of the company was the unexpected absence of Foreman Frank G. Tower whose father died suddenly the day before. The hearty sympathy of his company was extended to him, and his absence was much regretted.

The boys returned on Friday, and the kind attentions and generous hospitality of Excelsior H. & L. Co., No. 1, of Middletown, will long remain a pleasant memory in the hearts of Essex.

Mr. C. T. Vail, in reply to the toast, "Music," attempted a flight into the realms of poetry, and his verses certainly merit reproduction. They are as follows:

In all my life I never had a task
So difficult, so hard as this you ask.
I never sang a song or played a tune,
Ne'er twanged guitar beneath the silvery moon.
Ne'er sang a serenade to lady fair,
My sweetest notes would raise her very hair.
Of physics I might say I've taken pills,
The ladies might inspire my brain with thrills.
Of law I know a little, and might speak;
But talk of music, 'tis a madman's freak.

You won't excuse me? Will not let me rest?
Then will I speak of music I know best.
'Tis not the strains of Haydn or of Handel,
Those sweetest notes would raise her very hair.
Beside the music we have heard to-day,
Essex drummers proudly led the way.
Their bi-r-r-r and bi-r-r-r and r-r-r-r-r
Nerved every arm, inspired every man.

The music of the bells tells many tales;
Their tones bring back again, when memory fails,
The village school of childhood's happy days,
The church where mothers taught us prayer and praise.
Of Christmas chiming, of all days brightest, when
We sang of "peace on earth; good will to men;"
Independence Day, when pealing forth
From east to west, from south unto the north,
The joyous bell rang out "our land is free."
Come all the world and share our liberty.

The sweetest music of the wedding bell
Two oft is followed by the funeral knell.
Our Essex friends with me will shed the tear
Of sympathy with one who is no more.
He whom we hoped would be our chiefest guest,
At Bloomfield mourns his father laid to rest.
We sorrow with the son, we'll share his grief
Till time, the great restorer, brings relief.

At night, when snugly tucked away in bed,
With happy dreams fast running through our head,
The ominous music of the midnight notes
That peal from threatening fire bells angry throats,
Brings every gallant fireman to his feet,
And ere he's fairly clad he's in the street.
The music of the truck's resounding horn,
As towards the lurid light they spin along,
The clatter of the wheels upon the stones,
The foreman yelling in stentorian tones.

The cries of human beings in distress,
Shout in by flames which close and closer press;
The voices of the firemen, full of cheer,
Assuring them that danger now is near;
The joyous prattle of the rescued child,
The frantic questions of a mother wild,
Who finds her infant safe and sound at rest,
Reposing on some noble fireman's breast;
The howling marauder, when ends the troubled night.

And crawling into bed with morning light,
These make the music that the fireman knows,
This strange admixture of life's joys and woes.

The married fireman other music hears,
As in his room at daylight he appears.
Throws off his clothes, drops in his cozy bed,
And pulls the bed-clothes snug about his head.

Just falling into sleep he hears this tune:
"Oh, hubby, dear, pray hurry with a spoon,
Our child is sick!" The baby loudly squalls,
For, fortissimo, the very walls
Re-echo with its plaintive, wailing tones.

The music of the rain which pattered down
Last night, unwelcome was to Middletown;
It brought no pleasant memories in its train,
And each Excelsior muttered, "Shoot the rain."

One kind of music more and I have done:
At times the sweetest heard beneath the sun.
When comrades gay the festive board surround,
To fireman's ears there is no sweeter sound
Than clinking glasses, pledging to our friends
The love a fireman only comprehends.
Then rise, Excelsiors, your glasses fill
And drink to Essex Hooks with right good will,
And as together o'er the board they clink,
Each Hook his brother's health will fondly drink.
May Essex's shadow never smaller grow,
May friendship 'twixt us no abatement know.
